11 BRIEF OF APPELLEE

12
13 JURISDICTION

14 The jurisdiction of the United States District 15 Court to entertain appellant's petition for a writ of 16 habeas corpus is conferred by Title 28 United States Code 17 section 2253, which makes a final order in a habeas corpus 18 proceeding reviewable in the Court of Appeals when a 19 certificate of probable cause has issued.

20 STATEMENT OF THE CASE

21 A. Proceedings in the state courts.

22 Appellant, Jewell C. Beasley, was convicted upon 23 his plea of guilty in the Superior Court of San Diego
24 County of robbery in the first degree and on July 13, 1949, 25 was sentenced to the state prison for the time prescribed 26 by law.

1 No appeal was taken from this judgment of conviction.

2 An application for a writ of habeas corpus was 3 denied by the California Supreme Court on July 7, 1965.

4 B. Proceedings in the federal courts.

5 On August 5, 1965, sixteen years after his 6 conviction, appellant filed an application for a writ of 7 habeas corpus in the United States District Court, Northern 8 District of California, Southern Division. On that same
9 date, an Order to Show Cause was issued. Appellee, respondent
10 below, filed a Return to the Order to Show Cause on August 25, 11 1965. Appellant filed a Traverse to the Return to Order to 12 Show Cause on September 3, 1965. On October 27, 1965, the 13 District Court appointed counsel to represent appellant in 14 further proceedings before the court.

15 The District Court thereafter ordered that an 16 evidentiary hearing be held and the hearing was conducted 17 before the District Court on November 8, 1965 and January 5, 18 1966. Thereafter, additional points and authorities were 19 filed by the respective parties.

20 On February 7, 1966, the District Court denied the 21 petition for writ of habeas corpus, discharged the Order to 22 Show Cause and dismissed the proceedings. The District 23 Court concluded that appellant's plea of guilty was not the 24 product of coercion but rather the result of a considered 25 choice as he had previously been identified by the robbery
26 victim as the perpetrator and had been further implicated

1 by his codefendant. The court also determined that 2 petitioner's claim that he made certain incriminating 3 statements prior to being advised of his constitutional 4 rights was foreclosed since the United States Supreme 5 Court's ruling in Escobedo v. Illinois, 378 U.S. 478 (1964)
6 could not be retrospectively applied. Finally, the court
7 concluded that appellant was advised of his right to counsel 8 during the proceedings against him in the courts of the 9 State of California and that appellant knowingly and 10 intelligently waived that right.

11 On February 25, 1966 a certificate of probable 12 cause was issued by the Honorable Albert C. Wollenberg, 13 Judge of the United States District Court for the Northern 14 District of California, Southern Division. On March 2, 15 1966, a notice of appeal was filed.

16 STATEMENT OF FACTS

17 A felony complaint charging appellant with 18 robbery was filed in the Municipal Court of the San Diego
19 Judicial District on June 1, 1949. On June 3, 1949, appellant 20 was arraigned on the complaint and was advised of his rights.
21 Appellant was arraigned on the complaint and at that time
22 the court advised appellant of his right to be represented
23 by a lawyer at all stages of the proceedings. Appellant 24 affirmatively stated he did not wish to be represented by 25 counsel. Appellant was released on bail a few days after his 26 arrest and remained at large until the day of his sentencing,

1 July 14, 1949.

2 On June 21, 1949, appellant appeared before the 3 Superior Court of San Diego County for arraignment on the 4 information filed subsequent to the proceedings in the 5 Municipal Court. The reporter's notes of the proceedings
6 in Superior Court were destroyed after ten years (Govt.
7 Code § 69955). At that time the trial judge informed
8 appellant of his right to be represented by counsel. Judge
9 William A. Glenn of the San Diego Superior Court presided
10 at the arraignment and sentence. of appellant and testified 11 as to his customary practice and procedure which he followed 12 at that time. It was established by Judge Glenn that it 13 was his invariable practice to advise a defendant appearing 14 in a criminal case that he was entitled to be represented 15 by an attorney at all stages of the proceedings, that if the 16 defendant was without funds and wished the assistance of 17 counsel the court would appoint an attorney to serve without 18 charge. The defendant was given a copy of the information 19 and a transcript of the proceedings held at the preliminary 20 hearing and was advised that he could have witnesses summoned
21 in his behalf and that he could confront and cross-examine 22 the witnesses called by the State. The judge carefully 23 interrogated every defendant to determine that the defendant 24 knew of his right to counsel and that the defendant was 25 making a knowing and intelligent waiver of his right to 26 counsel and that he determined this from all the circumstances

1 including the defendant's attitude, demeanor and apparent
2 understanding of his explanation. If the defendant indicated 3 that he wished to proceed without counsel and enter a plea 4 of guilty Judge Glenn then informed the defendant of the 5 consequences of such a plea. In this case, Judge Glenn 6 stated that he would specifically inform the appellant 7 Beasley that the crime of robbery was punishable in the 8 state prison for a term of five years to life. Furthermore, 9 at this time Judge Glenn had before him and had reviewed 10 the transcript of the preliminary hearing when appellant
11 had admitted his participation in the robbery. Judge Glenn 12 thereafter accepted appellant's plea of guilty. The appellant 13 again appeared before the trial court a few weeks later on 14 July 13, 1949 for sentencing. After having read and 15 considered the probation report the court denied appellant's 16 application for bail and asked appellant why he had committed 17 the crime. Appellant replied that it was because of his 18 drinking. The court then asked appellant if he had any legal 19 cause to show why judgment should not be pronounced against 20 him. The appellant answered, "No, sir."

21 SUMMARY OF APPELLEE'S ARGUMENT

22 Since the appellant in his brief on appeal
23 has abandoned his trial court claims that his judgment
24 of conviction was the result of a coerced plea of guilty
25 and also his claim that his conviction was the result 26 of illegally obtained statements, appellee will confine

1 his argument to appellant's sole remaining contention,
2 that is, that he was deprived of his right to counsel
3 in the state court proceedings.

5 I

6 APPELLANT KNOWINGLY AND INTELLIGENTLY WAIVED
7 HIS CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT TO COUNSEL

8 The classic definition of the test to be 9 applied in determining whether an effective waiver of 10 a constitutional right has occurred is contained in 11 Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458 (1938). A waiver is 12 ordinarily an intentional relinquishment or abandonment 13 of a known right or privilege. This determination of 14 whether there has been an intelligent waiver of the 15 right to counsel must depend, in each case, upon the 16 particular facts and circumstances surrounding that 17 case, including the background, experience and conduct 18 of the accused. The application of this flexible 19 standard was recently reaffirmed by this Court in Wilson
20 v. Harris, 351 F.2d 840 (9th Cir. 1965).

21 The following factors relevant to determining 22 the issue of competent waiver were established in the 23 District Court:

24 Appellant was a literate adult twenty-one years
25 of age at the time of his conviction. He was gainfully 26 employed as a painter at a salary of about $76 a week.
He was released on bail shortly after his arrest and 1 remained on bail throughout the various proceedings until 2 the day sentence was imposed.

3 On June 3, 1949, when initially brought into 4 court for arraignment on the complaint charging him with 5 robbery appellant was informed of his right to be 6 represented by counsel at all stages of the proceedings.
7 Appellant affirmatively stated that he did not wish to 8 be represented by counsel. Appellant thereafter testified 9 and, while admitting his participation in the robbery, he 10 attempted to place the primary culpability on his companion, 11 Sgt. Wheatley. Thus, the evidence clearly supports the 12 finding of Municipal Judge Phillip Smith of the San Diego
13 Municipal Court that the appellant was aware of his right 14 to legal representation and knowingly and intelligently 15 waived that right at the preliminary hearing.

16 Thereafter on June 21, 1949, appellant appeared
17 for arraignment in the San Diego Superior Court before 18 Judge William Glenn. Since the transcript of this 19 fifteen-year-old proceeding had been destroyed, Judge 20 Glenn testified as to his practice and procedure at that 21 time. The trial Judge's testimony established that upon 22 his arraignment in Superior Court, a defendant was given 23 a copy of the information and the preliminary hearing
24 transcript; was advised that he could have witnesses summoned
25 in his behalf and that he could confront and cross-examine 26 witnesses called by the state; was advised that he was

1 entitled to be represented by an attorney at all stages of 2 the proceedings and that if the defendant was without 3 funds and wished the assistance of counsel the court
4 would appoint an attorney. It was established by Judge 5 Glenn that he carefully interrogated every defendant to 6 determine whether or not he was making an knowing and 7 intelligent waiver of his right to counsel. If the 8 defendant indicated he did not desire counsel and wished 9 to plead guilty, Judge Glenn informed him of the 10 consequences of such a plea, that is, that he would have 11 specifically informed the appellant that the crime of robbery
12 was punishable in the state prison for a term of five years
13 to life. At the time of accepting the plea, Judge Glenn 14 had before him and had reviewed the transcript of the 15 preliminary hearing wherein appellant admitted his 16 participation in the robbery.

17 Examination of the above particular facts and 18 circumstances surrounding appellant's entry of a guilty 19 plea compels the determination that appellant intentionally
20 relinquished the right to counsel, which right was known 21 to him at the time of his plea.

22 Appellant is attacking the validity of a conviction
23 based upon his plea of guilty entered in the San Diego County 24 Superior Court over sixteen years ago. A judgment of 25 conviction based upon such a plea of guilty is not likely 26 to be set aside. See Johnson v. Zerbst, supra at 468. In

1 attacking his conviction on the basis of denial of his 2 constitutional right to counsel, appellant has the burden
3 of proving such denial by a preponderance of the evidence.
4 See Johnson v. Zerbst, supra at 468-69; Moore v. Michigan, 5 355 U.S. 155, 161 (1957); Watts v. United States, 273 F.2d
6 10, 11-12 (9th Cir. 1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 982 (1960).
7 It must not be forgotten that the official state record 8 here indicates that appellant was duly arraigned in the 9 Superior Court. In properly arraigning appellant, the 10 Superior Court, being bound to follow the law of this 11 state, California Penal Code section 987, necessarily 12 determined that appellant competently, knowingly and intel-13 ligently waived counsel.

14 Two state court judges found in court proceedings 15 sixteen years ago that appellant then competently waived his 16 right to counsel. Judge Glenn was in a position to observe 17 appellant and to evaluate his responses. Certainly, "the 18 demeanor, the facial expression and the responses made by the 19 accused soon may convincingly disclose to an experienced 20 trial judge whether the accused is intelligently and 21 understandingly waiving his constitutional right." Davis v.
22 United States, 123 F.Supp. 407, 412 (D.Minn. 1954), aff'd., 23 226 F.2d 834 (8th Cir. 1955), cert. denied, 351 U.S. 912 24 (1956). Appellant attempts to attack the sufficiency of 25 the inquiry made by the state court concerning the possible 26 defenses he might have to charges brought against him.

1 But there is no such constitutional formula which must be 2 followed by a state trial judge in order to determine 3 whether a criminal defendant has completely waived his right
4 to counsel. See United States v. Lester, 247 F.2d 496, 499
5 (2d Cir. 1957). Von Moltke v. Gillies, 332 U.S. 708 (1947), 6 which is cited by appellant for this proposition, imposes 7 no such checklist of inquiry on state courts.

8 The type of judicial inquiry which Mr. Justice
9 Black outlined in Von Moltke as necessary for a valid 10 waiver of counsel was subscribed to by only four justices 11 of the Court. Of course, "lack of agreement by a majority 12 of the Court on the principles of law involved prevents it 13 from being an authoritative determination for other cases."
14 See United States v. Pink, 315 U.S. 203, 216 (1942). More-15 over, the requisites discussed in Von Moltke have not, to 16 appellee's knowledge, been adopted by either the United 17 States Supreme Court or any Court of Appeals as an absolute 18 constitutional standard against which any alleged waiver of 19 counsel must be measured. See, e.g., Twining v. United 20 States, 321 F.2d 432, 434-35 (5th Cir. 1963).

21 Significantly, Von Moltke involved a federal 22 conviction to which Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Criminal 23 Procedure applied. Thus, Mr. Justice Black spoke of "the 24 solemn duty of a federal judge." 332 U.S. at 722. And the 25 Courts of Appeal apparently have understood the requirements 26 discussed in Von Moltke to be inspired by Rule 11 and thus

1 limited to federal cases. See, e.g., United States v.
2 Lester, 247 F.2d 496, 499-500 (2d Cir. 1957); Aiken v.
3 United States, 296 F.2d 604, 606-07 (4th Cir. 1961); United 4 States v. Smith, 337 F.2d 49, 55 (4th Cir. 1964); United 5 States v. Diggs, 304 F.2d 929, 930 (6th Cir. 1962); Shelton
6 v. United States, 242 F.2d 101, 112 (5th Cir. 1957).

7 Even though the standards discussed in Von Moltke 8 may in fact furnish "certain guidelines for the District 9 Courts," even in these courts "the ultimate issue is simply 10 whether the accused knowingly and intelligently chose to 11 waive counsel." United States v. Smith, supra at 55.

12 The trial judge in appellant's case advised him 13 of his rights including the right to court-appointed counsel, 14 inquired of his desire for counsel, and informed him of the 15 nature of the charge and the punishment prescribed for the 16 offense. Further the trial court as a result of being 17 familiar with the transcript of the preliminary hearing was 18 aware of the appellant's version of what had occurred and the 19 circumstances in mitigation of the offense. With all of 20 these facts before him and upon his observance of the 21 appellant's answers and demeanor the judge concluded that 22 appellant competently waived counsel. Thus, it would appear 23 that the trial court's action was in essential compliance 24 with the formula set forth in Von Moltke. Assuming that the 25 formula described in Von Moltke was not followed in every 26 last detail, such fact does not vitiate the determination

1 of waiver and render the proceedings unconstitutional. See 2 Aiken v. United States, supra at 606-07; accord, Shelton v.
3 United States, supra at 112; United States v. Lester, supra 4 at 499.

5 Appellant did not indicate a desire for counsel
6 and in fact distinctly declared his desire to proceed
7 without counsel. The Constitution does not require 8 that in criminal proceedings the services of an attorney be 9 forced upon a defendant against his wishes. Von Moltke v.
10 Gillies, 332 U.S. 708, 724 (1948); Johnson v. United States, 11 318 F.2d 855, 856 (8th Cir. 1963); United States v. Redfield, 12 197 F.Supp. 559 (D.Nev. 1961), aff'd per curiam, opinion
13 adopted, 295 F.2d 249 (9th Cir. 1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S.
14 803 (1962).

15 None of the compelling circumstances present
16 in cases relied upon by appellant in his brief are present 17 here. In the instant case, appellant was fully aware of 18 the fact that he was entitled to counsel including court-
19 appointed counsel. Here, appellant was not held in jail
20 during the proceedings but rather was free on bail. Likewise 21 appellant was aware of the consequences of rejecting legal 22 advice and entering a plea of guilty, including the precise 23 sentencing consequences. Appellant was truly informed of his 24 rights and the nature of the charge against him and the 25 evidence indicates his clear and consistent desire to plead 26 guilty. There is nothing in the record to indicate appellant

1 was falsely advised, offered any inducement or coerced.
2 On the contrary, he made his desire emphatically clear to the 3 courts, to which he also indicated his guilt of the crime 4 charged.

5 Appellant was not denied his constitutional right 6 to counsel by the state courts, nor was he compelled to 7 enter a plea without the advice of counsel. His conviction 8 rests, therefore, upon a plea of guilty freely and voluntarily 9 entered after being fully advised by the state courts of 10 his right to counsel including his right to court-appointed 11 counsel. Thus a consideration of the surrounding facts and 12 circumstances compels the conclusion that he intelligently 13 and understandingly rejected the court's offer of counsel.

14 CONCLUSION

15 For the reasons stated above, it is respectfully 16 submitted that the order of the District Court denying 17 appellant's petition for a writ of habeas corpus should 18 be affirmed.

19 Dated: September 21, 1966.
